

Abstract

The present invention provides methods and compositions for producing and screening combinatorial libraries of multimeric proteins. The present invention relies 5 on the use of filamentous fungal heterokaryons that are produced using two or more parent strains into which a population of DNA molecules encoding variants of a multimeric protein have been introduced.